Sue Morris

Sport not only reveals character but helps build character. If you truly want to know a person, play a game with them.

The evening will examine the importance and value of principles behind whole life coaching and present evidence around how this approach positively impacts performance both on and off the field.

Coaches, parents, teachers and those involved with managing players will come away with some simple tools to intentionally coach life skills that they can use at their next training.

Sue Morris, a former New Zealand Women's Cricketer has had a lifetime involvement in sports. A trained teacher from Auckland, Sue currently works for Innerfit NZ, a company with the motto Success Starts Within. She has written resources for teachers, both nationally and internationally to teach character through Physical Education.
